Endophenotypic research provides a potentially useful database on phenotypes and endophenotypes for neuropsychiatric research in developing countries, according to findings of SKL published in Frontiers in Human Neuroscience.